TABLE OF CONTENTS

DEAR MEMBERS AND FRIENDS

During 2014 the Trust celebrated its Legacy Year – forty years since we were founded in 1974 and 125 years since 1889 when Frank Lloyd Wright built his home in Oak Park, where he would spend twenty years of family life and launch an architectural career of international stature.

Essential to the Trust's mission over forty years, has been service to our community and to the public. The Home and Studio was restored for the purpose of sharing it with visitors to Oak Park, and over the decades, those visitors came in increasing numbers from around the world.

In this celebration year, the Trust opened the balcony of Wright's Studio to the public for the first time in our history. Wright's Oak Park Studio was his architectural laboratory, an incubator of ideas shared by a talented team of young architects and designers including Walter Burley Griffin, Marion Mahony – the first practicing woman architect in America, William Drummond, Francis Byrne, George Grant Elmslie, and George Mann Niedecken. Wright's Studio is where it all began, a new chapter in American architecture. The opening of the studio balcony this year expands and enriches Wright's studio experience for our visitors.

In this Legacy Year, the Trust also produced our first Home and Studio App, launched a new recorded tour in eight languages, presented an All Wright Housewalk, announced a Legacy Society for planned gifts, and welcomed our founding volunteers home again for a grand Founders Day event. This year the Board of Directors also approved a new updated Trust logo that evokes the design era of our sites and our modern spirit.

Celebration of our Legacy Year has been a shared success. The commitment and support of our donors, volunteers, members, friends, and neighbors is invaluable. On behalf of the Board of Directors and our President & CEO Celeste Adams, I extend sincere thanks to all listed in this report, who contributed their talent and resources to make 2014 a landmark year and the work of the Trust an ongoing source of pride to our Chicago community.

Founders Day celebration

REPORT OF THE CEO: CELEBRATING THE TRUST'S LEGACY YEAR

CELEBRATING THE TRUST'S LEGACY YEAR

The Legacy Year has been a celebration of two generations at the Frank Lloyd Wright Trust. On June 17, Founders Day, the date on which the Trust was incorporated as a not-for-profit organization in the state of Illinois, the first generation returned to the Home and Studio that they saved and restored forty years ago. These are the shoulders upon which we stand, and we carry forward the work they began.

Five founders remain active at the Trust today and received unprecedented 40-Year Volunteer Service Awards: John Thorpe, Jack Lesniak, Susan Vrechek, Ann Marohn, and John Wood. Preservation architect John Thorpe, who played a leadership role in the restoration of the Home and Studio, was presented a special award for Lifetime Service.

The loyalty and ongoing commitment of Trust volunteers has forged the backbone of our organization and ensured our success over the decades. On Founders Day we recognized 61 dedicated individuals whose long term commitment—ranging from five to 40 years—has shaped a tradition of service at the Trust, and inspires a new generation who will continue to strengthen and grow the organization.

The 40th annual May Housewalk was All Wright in honor of the Legacy Year, and attracted over 3,000 visitors transported from house to house on red trolley buses. The day concluded with a Ragtime concert at Unity Temple by MacArthur genius award winner Reginald Robinson. The Oak Park and River Forest houses on the walk surround Wright's first Home and Studio designed in 1889 for his wife Catherine Tobin. It would remain his home and workplace for the next twenty years.

Wright selected a residential lot in Oak Park and built his house with money borrowed from Louis Sullivan. His studio workroom on the second floor would soon be transformed into bedrooms required for his growing family of six children. He added a playroom with a piano to the house. The All Wright weekend evoked Wright's love of music in the all-American Ragtime style of this era.

Eventually Wright would add an adjacent studio to create a work and residential complex as he would do again at Taliesin in Wisconsin and later in Arizona, the three forming a sequence of homes and studios that would produce an evolving progression of new American styles of architecture over his lifetime. The 125-year-old Oak Park Home and Studio is the oldest Wright site open to the public as a museum and the only home and studio site where he built several dozen buildings in immediate proximity. Since 1974 the Home and Studio has welcomed over two million visitors from around the world.

The weekend also included a lively Chairman's Reception with silent auction at The Rookery. Ultimate Plus guests traveled to picturesque Lake Delavan for a tour of the beautiful Penwern Estate including a main house, stables, gate houses, and boat house designed by Wright in 1900. The All Wright Weekend was a truly memorable Legacy Year celebration.

THE LEGACY CONTINUES

This year, the Trust launched a new Legacy Society with five initial members who have made a commitment to make a final gift to the Trust. Creating a personal legacy honors both the individual and the Frank Lloyd Wright Trust, ensuring that the work we do in education and preservation continues to make our rich community heritage more meaningful for everyone who lives here and who visits.

The Legacy Year has allowed us to restate our values and seek the support needed to fulfill the Trust's potential. The 2014 Annual Fund set a new record of $103,000, surpassing all previous years. With each passing year since the Annual Fund was established, total giving has increased and in 2014 through all of the Trust's combined giving and grants programs over $950,000 was raised from generous and loyal donors.

Among the 2014 grants recorded in this report The Getty Foundation grant of $50,000 in their Keeping It Modern program is an exceptional achievement. The Trust was one of ten international recipients of this first-time award that included the Salk Institute for Biological Studies and the Sydney Opera House. Robie House received $50,000 to create a long-term conservation management plan, the first of its kind for Wright sites.

THE NEXT CHAPTER

In 2014 for the first time in the Trust's history, the Studio Balcony opened to the public, allowing visitors a more complete architectural experience of the dramatic two-story space. Here the young Wright set the stage for his brilliant practice, gathering the talents of Walter Burley Griffin, Barry Byrne, Marion Mahony and artists such as Richard Bock. Here he designed over 140 buildings and created Prairie style, the first American style of architecture. Many of his commissions were in the surrounding neighborhood, and so Oak Park became the context of a new architectural vision. Wright's studio and Oak Park buildings have made the community unique in the world of early modern architecture.

Interactive interpretive panels installed this year in the balcony space present archival photos and information about members of Wright's studio and bring the space to life again as visitors learn more about the artists, designers, and architects of Wright's first and most significant studio. A new DVD and App about the Home and Studio were published for the Legacy Year, and a new historic neighborhood recorded walking tour in eight languages was also introduced to visitors.

TravelWright – Cultural Journeys by Design – introduced travelers to the Arts and Crafts tradition in England and Scotland, the Vienna Secession, Wright's vision of Japan, and the California modern craft movement.

Frank Lloyd Wright: Origins and Influences Part II continued in summer 2014 at the Pritzker Auditorium in the historic Monroe Building. Speakers included Christian Witt-Döring on Vienna in 1910, Kevin Nute on Japanese Art as a Means to Organic Architecture, and Wendy Hitchmough on Wright and the Origins of the House as a Work of Art. Funded by Terra Foundation for American Art, the entire series of six lectures by distinguished international speakers was filmed and videos of all programs can be viewed on the Trust's website.

The Trust's new partnership with Unity Temple established this beautiful setting for many new programs, including the Trust's annual Community Enrichment Series; an emerging artists series in partnership with the Luminarts Cultural Foundation; a program about poets inspired by Wright in collaboration with the Poetry Foundation; an adult workshop series; and a concert series.

A spring open house at the Emil Bach House marked the debut of this newly restored site to its Rogers Park and Evanston neighbors, and launched the Trust's new seasonal tours at this beautiful vacation stay and rental property along the Lake Michigan North Shore.

A BRIGHT FUTURE

The Ecological Imagination: Life and the Design of Urban Public Space was the topic of the 2014 Thinking into the Future: The Robie House Series on Architecture, Design, and Ideas. Landscape architect James Corner addressed a record audience of 400 at University of Chicago's Logan Center for the Arts and encouraged those present to envision with him the world's green cities of the future. Organized in partnership with University of Chicago, this is the fourth and most successful year for this annual program.

The future of the Trust depends upon the loyalty of our friends and donors who make our work in education and preservation possible. These individuals care deeply about the quality of life in our community and understand that our future is based upon the foundation of our historic past. Without memory we lose the meaning of our story.

Thank you to all of the donors who honor us with their trust and confidence in our work, in particular this year, the Hickory Foundation, the MacArthur Foundation, Alphawood Foundation, Terra Foundation for American Art, U.S. Bank, M. Necdet Ersoy, Joan and Bob Feitler, John Geary Trust, Harper Court Arts Council, T. Kendall Hunt

The Legacy Year has provided an opportunity to look back to the beginnings of Wright's career at the Home and Studio 125 years ago and the founding of the Frank Lloyd Wright Trust 40 years ago. Originally named the Home and Studio Foundation, the Trust changed its name to the Frank Lloyd Wright Preservation Trust when Robie House was added as a site in 1997. In 2013 the Trust shortened its name to Frank Lloyd Wright Trust and this year the Board of Directors adopted a new logo that incorporates an early modern typeface to create a fresh and updated image of the organization.

The Trust has grown in recent years to include five sites in the Chicago area. Attendance in 2014 totaled 150,000 compared to 140,000 in 2013. With 20% of our visitors from outside the United States, the Frank Lloyd Wright Trust has grown to become an international gateway to Wright's Chicago.
